

HEIN IMBERECHTS

I hold a Veterinary Medicine degree from the University of Ghent, Belgium (1985) and a Molecular Biology degree from the Free University of Brussels, VUB (1988), followed by a Ph.D. in 1992.

I served as Head of Department of bacteriology at Belgium's reference laboratory for infectious animal diseases, until February 2015.

I've been a member of the Scientific Committee of the Federal Agency for the Safety of the Food Chain in Brussels and am member of the Scientific Council of ANSES in Paris. I am Vice-President of the European One Health Association since October 2018 and Chair of the Animal Health and Welfare working group of SCAR.

From January 2018 to October 2023, I served as Scientific Coordinator of the One Health European Joint Programme within Horizon2020, and I initiated the preparations for the European Partnership on Animal Health & Welfare, which commenced in January 2024.
